President Reagan improving rapidly

WASHINGTON, April 1 (Agencies) — President Reagan, rapidly recovering from a bullet wound in the chest, took a walk in his hospital room Wednesday and an aide said the president might return to the White House next week.

A White House statement said Reagan, hit in the left lung in an assassination attempt Monday, had been moved out of the George Washington University Hospital intensive care unit and that he had taken a short walk.

It said the president was in good condition but experiencing some pain and fatigue. He had slept well during the night after staying up until 11 p.m. to watch some of the Hollywood Academy Awards ceremonies on television.

White House Chief of Staff James Baker said he visited the president Wednesday and left him sitting in a chair eating breakfast. He said he hoped the president would be out of the hospital sometime next week.

Officials said the president wanted to carry out a promise to throw out the first ball of the baseball season at a game between the Cincinnati Reds and Philadelphia Phillies in Cincinnati next Wednesday. The Cincinnati trip would be impossible, they said, but the president intended to hold scheduled meetings with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo in

LOOK OF CONCERN : America's First Lady Nancy Reagan wears a look of concern Wednesday as she leaves George Washington University Hospital after visiting President Ronald Reagan.

Can Brezhnev be attacked?

MOSCOW, April 1 (AFP) — An attack against Leonid Brezhnev similar to that on United States President Ronald Reagan Monday "is impossible," Soviet observers here said Wednesday, apparently forgetting, or unaware of, a 1969 incident in which a soldier shot at their president in front of the Kremlin.

The attack on Reagan in Washington was simply another symbol of America's violent society to the Soviet official and the man in the street. Indeed, commented the Communist Party newspaper Pravda Monday: "In the United States, nobody is safe, neither the ordinary man nor the statesman."

Several factors peculiar to the Soviet Union reduce the chances of success of any attack such as the 1969 Kremlin incident in which a deranged Soviet soldier tried to assassinate Brezhnev but shot at the wrong car, killing a driver instead.

First, the mentally unbalanced are known, and Detarck, the soldier, was taken a mental asylum and remains there. Second, Brezhnev does not travel as often as American presidents, and never plunges into crowds. His only regular public appearances are for May 1 (May Day, a workers' holiday) and November 7, the anniversary of the Russian revolution.

Fourth, weapons do not circulate in the Soviet Union as they do in the U.S., and they obviously are not sold without controls. Fifth, and perhaps most important, is the Soviet system itself, under which citizens and their movements are carefully watched. Any suspect, or opponent of the regime is isolated from society, and at the slightest transgression is pulled off the streets.

"Reagan's aggressor was already known by the police," one Soviet journalist told Agence France Presse. "In our country, we do not let the unstable roam free."

The official eye is trained on everyone, even other official eyes. Thus, when one curious militiaman along the Dacha route decided to try to clock Brezhnev's passing car with a radar speed gun that looked like a big pistol, he was shot dead on the spot by a colleague fearful of an assassination attempt.

"The assassination of President Kennedy and the dozen attempts to kill General de Gaulle are ever present in our minds, and we are taking no chances," a senior French police official said. "But everyone knows there is no 100 per cent effective protection," he added.

Police problems are confounded by the tendency of some leaders to downgrade security precautions. President Giscard d'E斯塔ing said on television he did not believe in extra special security measures, particularly during his frequent trips in the current French election campaign.

The French president, like De Gaulle before him, often breaks with protocol and wades into the crowds, shaking hands with the elderly and kissing children.

Tight security around Giscard

PARIS, April 1 (R) — France has tightened security precautions around President Valery Giscard d'E斯塔ing following the attempt on the life of President Reagan.

"The assassination of President Kennedy and the dozen attempts to kill General de Gaulle are ever present in our minds, and we are taking no chances," a senior French police official said. "But everyone knows there is no 100 per cent effective protection," he added.

Kingdom deplores Reagan murder bid

Riyadh, April 1 (SPA) — Saudi Arabia has deplored the assassination attempt against the life of American President Ronald Reagan. In separate cables to the president published Wednesday King Khalid and Crown Prince Fahd said "we were greatly disturbed by the news of the criminal attack on your excellency and on some other aides."

The cables added that "while we express our deep concern and strong condemnation for this malicious action, we thank God for your surviving the attempt and implore the Almighty God for your speedy recovery."

The Mexican border late this month. Doctors did not think he would fully recover until mid-June.

Baker said it was business as usual at the White House, the president being fully capable of taking decisions in the hospital. Vice President George Bush was carrying out his engagements and holding command authority to respond to any emergency. Reagan had signed an executive order Wednesday morning and some nomination of government officials Tuesday night, he said.

Baker said Press Secretary James Brady, shot in the head, was also making a fast recovery. Brady, who underwent brain surgery, spoke for the first time since the shooting and was able to move his arms and legs, the White House statement said.

Thailand premier toppled in coup

Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda restored democracy and held elections when the situation is stable."

Bangkok remained calm throughout the day, with traffic normal and most businesses open. Soldiers armed with M-16s backed up by machine guns and one or two armored vehicles, guarded most public buildings and television stations, but no clashes were reported.

Later Gen. Chitipatima appeared on television before a picture of the king, the Thai flag and a Buddhist shrine, all sacred institutions in Thailand. He was flanked by three high-ranking officers: the Supreme Commander Gen. Seri Na Nakhon, a senior Thai military officer and named an adviser by the revolutionary committee, Lt. Gen. Vasin Isarangkun Na Ayuhuyi, commander of the first army, and Admiral Kate Santwajak, deputy commander of the navy.

The coup came at 2 a.m. (1900 GMT) Tuesday. Radio Thailand announced an hour later that a "revolutionary council" of senior military officers had taken over the government, deposed Prem, suspended the constitution and dismissed the cabinet.

The announcement said the deputy army commander, Gen. Sant Chitipatima, would head the council, and that Prem had resigned both as prime minister and army commander.

However, a few hours later, Prem met with King Bhumipol Adulyadej at his Bangkok palace, and the prime minister and the entire royal family flew to the Suranare army base in northeast Thailand, headquarters of the Thai second army. There, Prem announced on regional radio that he had not resigned and would fight the coup, with his headquarters at the base, 150 miles (240 kms) northeast of the capital.

Prem claimed the four Thai regional armies behind him, and the King and Royal family were under his protection. In Bangkok, the revolutionary council announced it had taken over because of the deterioration of Thai society caused by an ineffectual bureaucracy; a rising crime rate, inflation and the erosion of the country's moral values. In a length statement published in a Bangkok newspaper and read later by Sant on the state-owned television network, the council promised to eliminate lawlessness and to safety in your lives. Most of the people have been facing hardship in their livelihood under the prospect of the social and economic state, he said, reading from the statement. "The council could not tolerate any more the rivalry for personal profit among various groups, the agitation and the undermining of the security of the state," he said. Citing increasing drug use, selfishness, rape and murder as the reasons for the takeover, he added that "the revolutionary council will remain in power only for as long as necessary to solve the problems and prevent them from becoming worse when we are certain that the situation is stable, we will hold a general election."

Gen. Chitipatima will assume the powers and duties of prime minister as head of the revolutionary committee, Radio Thailand announced Wednesday.

Meanwhile, unconfirmed reports said troops loyal to Gen. Prem were Wednesday massing around the Thai capital.

Units from the second Thai army loyal to Gen. Prem, overthrown by a military revolutionary committee by deputy army chief Sant Chitipatima, were also heading for Bangkok from their base in Northeastern Thailand, where Gen. Prem went after the coup, the reports said.

Observers believed that Gen. Sant was having increasing trouble controlling the situation.

Peace panel halts efforts

By Wahib Ghobash

JEDDAH, April 1 — The leader of the Islamic peace mission President Ahmed Sekou Toure Wednesday announced that efforts at summit level to mediate a ceasefire between Iraq and Iran have been suspended.

Speaking after a meeting of the mission, which returned from Baghdad Tuesday night, Sekou Toure however, said that the secretary general of the Organization of the Islamic Conference Habib Chatil will continue to shuttle between the two warring countries to reach a mutual understanding.

The Guinean president added that Iraq and Iran did not reject the Islamic peace package but tried to make certain amendments to take into consideration some basic elements proposed by both sides.

Sekou Toure said that Islamic mission was not acting as a court although it was trying to settle the dispute in the light of Islamic values to draw the two countries to a ceasefire.

He said that the mission's task was difficult as it was working for a package settlement as proposed by OIC.

President Sekou Toure also said that the mission will submit new proposals to the two countries. One of the proposals is to establish an Islamic court to define the responsibility of starting the war.

The court will also propose a settlement for the dispute over the Shatt al Arab estuary between Iraq and Iran. Another proposal to the two sides will be to accept the formation of a committee to make a serious study of the waterway dispute.

The president added that the two countries will also participate in the work of the committee. The peace mission will continue to meet in Jeddah when necessary, he said.

Both Iran and Iraq took a hard stance during the talks with the mission in Tehran Monday and Tuesday and in Baghdad Tuesday and Wednesday, according to official communiques from the two capitals.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein told the mission he had no intention of "maintaining occupied Iranian territories" but would not compromise on Iraq's territorial and offshore rights in the disputed border, the official Iraqi news agency reported.

Under Commerce Ministry orders

Rules classify hotels

By Farouk Luqman

JEDDAH, April 1 — The Commerce Ministry issued regulations Monday to fix hotel standards and tariffs charged to customers. The orders were issued by Commerce Minister Soliman A. Solaim.

The hotels have been divided into seven categories ranging from deluxe to third class according to building size, services and general appearance. A deluxe hotel must rate 150 marks to qualify for that rating. It cannot charge more than SR1,000 for a normal suite and SR2,250 for a supersuite of two bedrooms.

The rates descend gradually across the spectrum until it reaches the lowest range, the III class (B) hotels, which are permitted to place four beds to a room and charge a modest rate per bed.

The general manager of Jeddah's Al Badr Sheraton, Sameer Zoghi, said he was satisfied with the pricing system and the classification of the hotels. Sheraton, which belongs to the top of the league in the country, has 500 rooms and, like the Meridien, the Hyatt Regency, the Nova Park and others under construction, is a deluxe hotel of the first order.

"The pricing was fair," Zoghi said. "And it has come at the right time since the country is getting more deluxe and first class hotels than it can handle profitably." He did not expect much more growth in the next five years because of this proliferation. Apart from those in operation, others are in the final stages of completion including the Intercontinental, the Holiday Inn and the Hilton. They are all in Jeddah.

Meridien's Resident Manager Manfred Moennich said the new regulations are reasonable in view of the multiplicity of hotel rooms in the city and in the country as a whole. "We are happy with the present situation," he said. Previously the prices were on the high side because of the scarcity of decent accommodation and the relatively high cost of labor." Now it is different and the ministry has done well to review the structure and the various kinds of hotel accommodation available and award it a clear class, he added. In spite of the glut the Meridien is doing quite well with an occupancy rate well into the seventies, the manager said.

The government order classified the hotels into deluxe, I class (A), I class (B), II (A), II (B), III (A), III (B), the last category was created to cater to a large section of the traveling population who need hotel accommodation at price within their reach. They were given 20 marks which they must satisfy before they are licensed, the ministry said.

The marks were awarded on the basis of 40 for the building, 40 for the services, 25 for the rooms, 25 for the management, 10 for recreational facilities and 10 for the general outlook. Deluxe hotels must qualify for at least 120 degrees, I class (A) for 100, I class (B) for 90 and the II class for 60.

The pricing structure, the ministry said, was decided on after careful study of the cost of accommodation and the services offered to the customers, with the price rising as the services improve and the number of persons per room also increases.

At a f class hotel, or four-star, a normal suite should not cost more than SR850, SR1750 for a supersuite. The cost is lower for four-star (B) hotels.

An additional bed, requested by the customer, should not cost more than SR75 at the deluxe hotels, SR60 at the first class (A), SR50 at the first class (B), SR40 at the II class (A), SR30 at the II class (B) and SR20 at the III class. A and B service charges have been fixed at 15 per cent for the five-stars and 10 per cent for the others. No other charges should be made in the name of service on any pretext.

These prices and rates will be allowed to double in Mecca and Medina during the pilgrimage season because the owners of the hotels there usually reforecast a lot of business during the off-season, but must keep their hotels open and staffed throughout the year.

Similarly, the rates will be allowed to rise by 25 per cent in the summer resort areas like Taif, Abha, Khamis Mushait, Al Baha and Baljash during the summer months.

The Director General of Hotels at the Commerce Ministry, Abdul Aziz Al Jasser, said these instructions have been intimated to the hotels which were requested to display them prominently for the attention of their customers.

INSPECTION: Riyadh Deputy Governor Prince Sattam inspected police patrol and traffic offices during an inspection tour Tuesday. He advised the officers and men to deal with the public kindly while they do their job efficiently.

Tour inspected projects Sattam denies recreation city

RIYADH, April 1 (SPA) — The recreation city project is nothing yet but an idea; studies have not been completed and no instructions whatsoever have yet been given on it. Riyadh Deputy Governor Prince Sattam said Tuesday.

Commenting on a news item distributed Monday, the prince said that nothing has been decided so far about the size of the project, its location or the area that it will cover. He said that his tour the previous day was not meant to find a suitable location for a recreation city, but to inspect a number of major projects here, such as the ring road. The proof is that he was accompanied by Communications Undersecretary Dr. Nasser Al-Salloum, he said.

Prince Sattam said he also inspected the limited income people's housing project and the evidence is that he was also accompanied by Riyadh Mayor Sheikh Abdullah Al-Naim. He also visited other projects, he said. He stressed however that despite the fact that the tour had nothing to do with a recreation city, the project hopefully will materialize one day.

RIYADH, April 1 — A trade delegation from Pakistan will visit the Kingdom shortly to explore the market for Pakistani minerals, a Pakistan embassy press statement said Wednesday.

It will hold meetings with officials and businessmen and negotiate deals with the interested parties.

Mineral-rich Pakistan has been exporting several minerals to a number of countries, but its exports to the Kingdom have remained limited so far because of transportation bottlenecks, the statement said.

At traffic directors meeting

Driving rules eyed

RIYADH, April 1 (SPA) — Directors of traffic departments and their branches in the Kingdom recommended the application of immediate punishment and fines on a larger scale.

The meeting, which concluded in Riyadh Wednesday, also recommended continued spot checks on the installation of taxi-meters and their operation. Taxis should abide by the traffic regulations restricting the specific color for taxis and painting their plates numbers on the front windows.

The traffic officials called for making traffic week an educational event to increase the awareness of the public about regulations and traffic safety only, and not to concentrate on punishing offenders.

Public security Director Gen. Abdullah Al-Sheikh chaired the final session. The

COMMENT

By Khaled Hassan Al Sheikh
Al Jadid

One morning while I stopped my car before a red traffic signal, another driver close to me looked right and left and, being sure of the absence of a policeman, gave full throttle to the accelerator and almost flew off with screeching tires without any regard for the red signal. He just left me wondering on the usefulness of this foolhardiness, and I asked myself whether he wanted to sacrifice his life trying to save a few seconds or minutes. I could think of no convincing reply.

I reminded me of another incident in which two youths were speeding away in their car. Suddenly a car coming from the opposite direction crashed into it and turned the car upside down. They survived the impact, yet one of them lost his mental capacities while the other suffered some physical bandicaps.

If we look back at the frequent car crashes we would find our hearts filled with sorrow and grief. But, regrettably, some of us do not take any lesson from what they see and hear, and try to contribute to this state of affairs. I feel a driver ought to remember that, however convinced he may be of his driving, he may come across someone less experienced at the controls. It pains me to see people physically handicapped as a result of their reckless driving.

Everyone will agree, I am sure, that the car has been made to serve us, and not to become a means for suicide. We bring misery to us and others just because we ignore driving rules. I would, therefore, ask everyone to be warned from the daily incidents, to be able to avert any possible crash and thus save his life and, perhaps, the lives of others.

meeting also aimed at achieving special cooperation with the Communication Ministry in regard to road blocks and signs. Deputy Communications Minister Dr. Nasser Al-Saloom and other senior ministry officials attended the meeting.

The recommendations also included opening traffic offices that would receive callers 24 hours a day, and undergoing a study on the possibility of making safety checks on vehicles in the Kingdom. The meeting called for retrieving license plates from all junks cars, banning pick-up trucks from working in passenger lines and prohibiting damaged cars which lack safety conditions from driving in the street unless repaired.

The officials demanded stepping up campaigns on any offense, especially exceeding speed limits, under age drivers, those driving without licenses; or any missing front or rear lights, use of high beam lights, use of loud horns and disturbing the public peace by causing noises through excessive friction of tires or horns.

The officials also called for special attention to people injured in traffic accidents and to inform their relatives the minute their identities are established. The meeting stressed the importance of giving more attention to training traffic officers and provide them with special education to deal with citizens and expatriates.

Col. Muhammad ibn Raja Al-Harbi, director of the general directorate of traffic, said that the recommendations and proposals will be submitted to Gen. Al-Sheikh to be considered for implementation.

4 houses blown up1 dies, 1 hurt in Israeli attack on U.N. forces

BEIRUT, April 1 (AP) — Israeli troops raided a U.N.-held village in South Lebanon before dawn Wednesday, blew up four houses and clashed with a U.N. patrol, the U.N. information office in Beirut said.

U.N. spokesman Samir Sanbar said one Lebanese army sergeant was killed and one Lebanese soldier was wounded in the house-blowing process during the raid on Tulun, a village held by the Nigerian contingent of the 6,000-strong U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon.

Both victims of the blast belonged to a 700-man Lebanese battalion serving with UNIFIL in an effort to bring the whole of southern Lebanon under the control of Lebanon's central government of Beirut, according to Sanbar.

UNIFIL's new commander Maj. Gen. William Callaghan, of Ireland, has declared he intends to carry out UNIFIL's mandate of Peacekeeping in SinaiIsrael wants all-American force

By Fouzi Asmar
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, March 31 — Israel is currently putting increased pressure on the Reagan administration to station an all-American peacekeeping force in the Sinai, informed sources said. Despite support for this proposal, particularly among members of the National Security Council, the Reagan administration remains committed to a multi-national force that would include American troops.

This position was clearly stated by Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger who appeared on ABC TV's Sunday morning program issues and Answers. Asked whether the American troops targeted for the Sinai peacekeeping force would be part of the Rapid Deployment Force, Weinberger said, "Absolutely no."

Weinberger said that the administration extending central Lebanese authority up to Lebanon's 1948 truce lines with Israel. This would involve deployment of 900 more Lebanese regulars in the area and the dismantling of Haddad's enclave.

Tension between Haddad's estimated 2,000-strong militia and UNIFIL came to a peak two weeks ago, when Haddad's guns shelled the U.N.-policed village of Kantara to prevent the stationing of a 30-man Lebanese regular platoon with UNIFIL there. Two Nigerian troops died instantly and two died later in hospital.

Palestinian commandos said Tuesday they had destroyed part of a railway linking Beersheba and Kiryat Gat in Israel's southern region of Negev. A military spokesman quoted by the Palesone News Agency Wafa said explosives planted on the line, being used by the Israeli army, went off Tuesday night disrupting rail traffic.

favored the peacekeeping force which included other countries also.

Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for the Near East Michael E. Sterner is currently in Israel in an attempt to win Israeli support for troops from other countries. The Israelis are rejecting the concept of a multinational force in an attempt to force the U.S. into accepting their demands, sources said.

The Israelis hope that the U.S. will change its mind and use both the bases in the Sinai as well as bases within Israel for its operations in the region. Moreover the Israelis see the stationing of American troops in the Sinai as a means of strengthening American-Israeli ties, sources added.

Under the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, the Israelis must withdraw from the Sinai by March 26, 1982. The Israelis refuse to withdraw, however, before a peacekeeping force that they consider suitable is in place, sources point out.

Morocco claims

2,000 Polisario fighters killed

RABAT, April 1 (R) — The pro-government daily Maroc Soir has said Moroccan armed forces killed 2,000 Polisario Front fighters last week in the fiercest battle of their five-year war in the Western Saharan desert.

Both sides have reported a big battle at Guelta-Zemmour, a garrison near the Mauritanian border, and both claimed victory. A Moroccan military communiqué said Friday that more than 300 fighters died. It gave Moroccan casualties as 36 dead and 55 wounded in four days of fighting.

Maroc Soir said the battle was "a victory of unprecedented dimensions" in the war and that Polisario had used "very large forces and heavy equipment, notably armor." "Enemy losses were enormous. They left on the ground more than 2,000 dead," most of them killed by artillery fire and air attacks, the newspaper said.

Thai Muslim families flee into Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR, April 1 (AP) — A total of 131 Muslims from Betong district in southern Thailand have fled to the Malaysian town of Baling to seek refuge from attacks by Communist guerrillas.

The first batch of 42 began arriving last Wednesday, with more coming in Monday, the chief minister of Kedah state Syed Nahar Shababuddin told reporters Tuesday after visiting the refugees in Baling, 240 kms north of here. They traversed the jungle to cross the border into Malaysian territory, he said. The two groups comprised 40 men, 35 women and 56 children, all from 21 families.

The Thai Muslims, who came from six villages, are now housed at the town hall in Baling where they are being looked after by the Red Cross. Some refugees said communist guerrillas had been harassing them for the past fortnight. They said several villagers had been killed in night raids.

Syed Nahar said the refugees, mostly rubber tappers, decided to flee their villages out of fear for their lives. The state government had been forced to provide them shelter on humanitarian grounds, he said.

There are 3,000 guerrillas of the banned Communist Party of Malaysia operating along the 500-kms long Thai-Malaysian border. The guerrillas are mostly active in the Betong area.

Sadat: Egypt selling arms to Iraq

CAIRO, April 1 (R) — President Anwar Sadat, in an announcement apparently designed to improve his battered image in the Arab world, has confirmed that Egypt was selling ammunition to Iraq.

Iraq has been among the toughest Arab critics of Egypt's 1979 peace treaty with Israel, but Sadat said in a speech that he had decided on the sale in gratitude for Baghdad's past military assistance to Egypt. Until now, Egypt has remained strictly neutral in the Gulf war. Sadat said the sale should not be seen as a change in his position and that he still condemned Iraq for launching the invasion on Iran.

In his speech, to an annual meeting of the Egyptian journalists' syndicate, the president said Iraq approached him through a third party and later sent an emissary to Cairo to sign the deal.

Informed sources said that Oman, one of the few Arab states to maintain diplomatic relations with Cairo, played an intermediary role in the deal which involved ammunition and spare parts for Sam Missiles.

It was the first public confirmation of persistent rumors that Cairo was helping arm Iraq. Only two days ago, top Egyptian officials flatly denied an American television report that Cairo had sold 4,000 tons of ammunition, missiles and spare parts to Iraq.

"In my opinion the Sony developed Beta format is superior to VHS in several ways, including better cassette design, superior tape handling and overall better video engineering." — VIDEO MAGAZINE, DECEMBER 1980.

Betamax is Superior

AND
CONSUMERS AGREE
ALL 70%
OF THEM

SONY's Betamax and the Sony Beta Home Video format is superior in technology, design, handling and picture quality, than the competing VHS brands

That seems to be the unanimous opinion of three top international consumer electronics magazines, which recently featured test reports on various video machines.

The magazines published in U.S.A., Germany, and Japan, three of the world's most advanced countries, concluded that the Sony Betamax Video, and Sony Beta format is today's best buy in video equipment.

And that too seems to be the verdict of video owners in the Middle East and Saudi Arabia:

Atleast 70% of all video buyers in the Middle East have chosen Betamax and the Beta format for their homes.

It is not surprising then that the Sony Home Video System is backed by the most comprehensive service and maintenance guarantees.

These include a six month guarantee on free maintenance and parts replacement, and a life-time guarantee of service and maintenance by Japanese engineers (applicable only on sets bought through MEE showrooms).

All this is in line with Sony's international policy of maintaining the top quality of Sony products for your continued entertainment for years to come.

The facts speak for themselves. Need we say more?

SENSELESS VIOLENCE

As the president of the United States lies in hospital recovering from his wound, it is worth recalling that the speech he gave half an hour before the attempt on his life contained reference to the spread of violent crime in the country and the Administration's resolve to confront it. It is also worth recalling, though certainly with regret, that he has always been opposed to stricter gun control than at present exists.

Statistics from the United States provide full justification to the general outcry at the spread of violence in this world's most prosperous and advanced nation, where fear has been dominating the cities for such a long time, and where firearms claim around fifty eight murder victims each day — aside from the wounded. Such an appalling scale of violence has led many to consider the country as facing a veritable internal war, one which it is, moreover, steadily losing.

There are fifty-two million guns in the hands of the population, being bought at the rate of two million each year. Many have drawn what seems to them an obvious correlation between this proliferation of the means of violence and that of violence itself. But many, represented and organized through the powerful Gun Lobby, have denied this and successfully withheld attempts to change the existing Gun Laws.

The argument between the two sides goes back and forth. But the fact remains that the United States, which claims to be facing international terror abroad, is actually engaging in terror at home — one which is not supplied with weapons from any other source but from the country itself, a terror which has claimed as victim, but mercifully not a fatality, the president of the republic himself.

Saudi Arabian Press Review

Newspapers Wednesday mostly led with Saudi Arabia's denunciation of an attempt on U.S. President Ronald Reagan's life last Monday. They highlighted congratulatory cables sent by King Khalid and Crown Prince Fahd on the safety of the president. In a lead story, Al-Yawm reported improvement in Reagan's condition while his press secretary James Brady was reported in a critical state.

All newspapers frontpaged the Islamic goodwill committee's meeting with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein Tuesday, saying that the committee would reach some tangible results in a month's time. They also gave front-page coverage to the arrival of the Indonesian Minister of Oil, Dr. Subroto, to discuss the coordination of stances within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

Al-Bilad reported in a page one story that Prince Abdullah, second deputy premier and head of the National Guard, will watch a live maneuver by the National Guard's joint armed divisions Monday and Tuesday. The sanction of SR900 million for the expropriation of properties in Qasim was covered as a prominent front-page story by Al-Jazirah. Al-Medina quoted Somali President Siad Barre's advisor Brig. Ahmed Sulaiman Abdullah as saying, "We agree on the immediate restoration of relations with Ethiopia". He also praised Saudi Arabia's "wise, human and pioneering stances" on Arab, Islamic and international issues.

Newspaper editorials mainly commented on the attempted assassination of the U.S. president, the Iraq-Iran conflict and the situation in Lebanon.

Discussing international terrorism, Al-Medina observed that the whole world shares the American people's concern with rising terrorism. The Arab world, which has been subjected to various kinds of force and tyranny, shares America's anxiety over the tragic incident which aimed at the life of the U.S. president, the paper said. It added that the Arab world denounces such terroristic acts, and hopes that the incident would motivate the U.S. leader to dedicate every effort to tackle the causes of this phenomenon and to repel Zionist and communist forces which have their open contribution in such terroristic acts.

Al-Jazirah asked "... whether there was any supernatural power that neutralized the effect of all equipment in the possession of the security men surrounding the president. The paper added that, depending on faith and reality, the answer would be in the affirmative; as all investigations with the assailant would fail to give a convincing interpretation of the inefficacy of the sophisticated instruments. It said that power is not an indispensable logic in international relations or in interaction with the crucial issues of the nations of the world.

The paper recalled a remark made by the American civil rights leader, Jesse Jackson, that the U.S. has a disturbed policy influenced by a blind belief in power, which only implies more risks and threats to America itself. These threats have started with the president himself, it said.

Okaz also condemned terrorism and called upon the forces of the world to work for construction, not destruction. The paper described the creation of Israel in the heart of the Arab world as the biggest crime of the world. That the bullet of terrorism has already reached its chest, Reagan must now work hand in hand with the peace-loving states of the world to eliminate the cells of terrorism and violence, the paper said.

On the other hand, Al-Yawm discussed the task of the Islamic goodwill committee, saying that the Iraq-Iran war endangers the security of the whole region and might become a powerful cause of a world war emanating from the Gulf itself. The whole region is suffering from instability as a result of this war and, therefore, the Islamic nation has pinned great hopes on the committee that it would succeed in bringing about peace, harmony and stability in the Gulf region, said the paper. It advised both parties to exercise self-restraint and show patience in order to reach a mutually acceptable solution.

Concerned with the Lebanese situation, Al-Bilad noted that the legal authority in Lebanon is exerting every effort to restore normalcy in the country and to allow the regular army to exercise its full authority in all parts of the country. But all its measures have exhausted and security conditions are continuously deteriorating in every street of Lebanon, it said. The paper highlighted some observers' view that the legal authority would have to confront every illegal authority now active in perpetuating terror in the country.

the Sudanese frontier, and a senior Sudanese army officer has reported that many new airstrips are being built close to the border with Sudan so that Libyan planes could carry out strikes deep into the Sudan's Darfur region.

The potentially-explosive situation along the Chadian border has resulted in a return to closer relations between Sudan and Egypt. These cooled somewhat after the Camp David agreement and a Sudanese ambassador will be sent again to Cairo in the near future, after a long break. Both Sadat and Numeiri appear determined to beat back any border attacks by the Chadian army, or the Libyans, and in the event of a full attack on Sudan, Egypt has promised full military support.

The Sudan government appears to fear the Chad developments are all part of a deliberate plan by the Soviet Union to surround Sudan with its client states, along the lines of Ethiopia and South Yemen, and is seeking full guarantees of support from Egypt if it is next on the list for 'destabilization'.

Observers here note that President Numeiri has been deliberately trying to patch up all other relations with neighboring states, especially with Ethiopia, so that his forces can now be concentrated in the west, where he sees the main threat to his and Sudan's — future rapidly developing. (LOS).

Plea in U.S. for Pacific alliance

By Ramon E. Myers

WASHINGTON —

In the United States today, one school of strategic thinking wants a strong China-Japan-U.S. alliance to counter the Soviet Union. Another school argues that China cannot be trusted, so the United States should rely on a Pacific basin alliance of Japan and South Korea that would include Taiwan, the ASEAN countries, Australia and New Zealand.

At the heart of these opposing strategies is the Taiwan question. Proponents of the U.S.-Japan-China triangle say that Taiwan is no longer important for maintaining the balance of power in Asia with the Soviet Union. Opponents argue that strategically located Taiwan should not be abandoned and that the United States should guarantee its security according to the U.S.-Taiwan Relations Act of March 1979.

For many years, the issue of Taiwan's security sidetracked U.S./China efforts to restore diplomatic recognition. Even after normalization, Taiwan's security continues to endanger U.S.-China relations. In recent months, spokesman of the People's Republic of China have voiced displeasure with the U.S.-Taiwan Relations Act and hinted that U.S.-China relations would be jeopardized if Washington tried to implement it fully. The Reagan administration will soon have to make many decisions on trade, transfer of advanced technology and military aid that will affect both U.S.-Taiwan and U.S./China relations.

Can the United States walk the tightrope of maintaining close ties with Taiwan while gradually expanding the exchange of people and goods with China? The United States can and should do this, I believe, but how?

The Reagan administration should give Taiwan weapons, especially new jet fighters to improve Taiwan's air defenses.

The Taiwanese should have greater access to American officials, and the ban on their meeting in U.S. government buildings should be lifted.

Taiwan's coordination council for North American affairs should have five more offices in the United States.

U.S. representatives in Taipei should be able to visit Taiwan's foreign ministry and other departments.

Any abrogation of Taiwan's commercial treaties with the United States should be avoided.

Such action by the administration would underscore U.S. intentions to ensure Taiwan's security. But what about the United States and China?

Peking's leaders hope to obtain additional credit from the U.S. Export-Import Bank to cash in on the $2 billion credit line that former Vice President Walter F. Mondale offered China in 1979. Peking wants to buy nuclear power-generating equipment from U.S. companies to build six nuclear power plants. China also wants to buy more "dual-purpose" equipment with military-related application, such as computers from Control Data, Hewlett-Packard and other U.S. suppliers. China wants to conclude negotiations with U.S. companies, such as Peabody Coal Co. and General Electric's Utah International subsidiary, to develop for export part of its surface coal-mining output. China needs marketing outlets in the United States, and has approached such giants as General Motors, Control Data and Dresser Industries for assistance in setting up special trading agencies to do business with China. China also wants to buy commercial aircraft from McDonnell Douglas and Boeing.

Both China and Taiwan want a great deal from the United States, and already are locked into exchange arrangements that would be costly to divest and renegotiate with other nations. The Reagan administration, therefore, can adopt a policy of gradualism, evenhandedness and diplomacy toward both. How would this work if the administration granted Taiwan new jet fighters for its defense? Before any official announcement of such sales, our ambassador in Peking would inform the Chinese that the United States intends to sell new jet fighters to Taiwan over a long period. Similarly, the United States stands ready to provide China with credit to purchase certain equipment and technology, even military-related technology, but with a long-term transfer for military use.

Could we reasonably hope to succeed with this strategy, considering Peking's recent retaliation against another nation, the Netherlands, that supplies arms to Taiwan? Peking downgraded its ambassador to the Netherlands to a charge of affairs because that country insisted on selling several submarines to Taiwan. Peking will certainly threaten to downgrade diplomatic ties with Washington, too, if the White House sells advanced jet fighters to Taiwan. Peking also would mount an intensive propaganda campaign to denounce such action.

Eventually, however, the Chinese will back off. China is already locked into complex transactions with the United States, and needs Washington as much as Washington needs China at this critical time. Peking leaders are struggling to maintain Communist Party control over the many groups that are either critical of Deng Xiaoping's modernization strategy or are demanding more liberalization.

What if China suddenly turns to Moscow and suggests fence-mending? This act would merely confirm that any alliance with a Marxist-Leninist state is built on sand, and we always must be prepared for the worst. (LAT)

Letter to the editor

Sir,

Daily newspapers carry advertisements for vacancies in firms and all include the caption "Foreigners with transferable Iqamas" confining the applicants, while the best suited for the jobs are restrained from seeking better pastures.

Establishments import man-power with much paperwork with the foreign ministry and these establishments will not part with their employees for the risk of being blacklisted for future block visas, hence when an employee's contract is over or dismissed, a certificate of departure is obtained at the airport, by which they could replace that employee.

Those firms who advertise, therefore, are openly violating the Kingdom's laws fostering the possibilities of more illegal immigrants and seeking to avoid the granting of legitimate terms and conditions on a contract, like R & R, vacation, bonuses, prepaid airline tickets and housing benefits.

Why cannot these establishments consider all applicants and offer them the usual terms and conditions with better facilities allowing at the same time for the firm to benefit by a replacement,

Yours faithfully,
Reggie Edwards

Sudan fears attack from Chad

KHARTOUM —

Any possible move by Chadian President Goukouni Oueddei for a pre-emptive strike against Habre, at least until he has regrouped his forces and been able to re-equip them with new weapons. These have been promised by Egypt and some are reported to be already on their way, following a secret meeting between Habre and President Sadat in Egypt.

In Sudan, President Jafaar Numeiri has put his forces on alert in the west since serious threats developed along the Chadian border and several Chadian aircraft penetrated Sudanese airspace. There have been frequent shuttles of military supplies from Khartoum to El Geneina, as well as several military missions currently advising the Sudanese on the most effective measures to throw back a possible incursion from Chad. Many Egyptians are believed to be stationed along the border as military advisers and the Sudan has been promised Egypt's full support if there is an attack from Chad.

Meanwhile, President Numeiri continues to insist that Habre's recent defeat was masterminded by Soviet military advisers and was not done in the usual style of Col. Qaddafi, although Libyan troops, tanks and aircraft played a major role.

In recent press interviews, Numeiri has claimed that Soviet Tupolev transports have been operating a steady service, bringing Libyan tanks right up to the Sudanese frontier, and a senior Sudanese army officer has reported that many new airstrips are being built close to the border with Sudan so that Libyan planes could carry out strikes deep into the Sudan's Darfur region.

The impenetrable courtroom

By Robert L. Jackson

WASHINGTON, (LAT) — It is probably the most unusual courtroom in America. Two heavy hank-vault doors, each with a combination lock, bar the public. An electronic sweep is conducted before each session to prevent bugging. Even the "defendant" is not permitted inside. He is not even informed of the proceedings.

Such are the tight security precautions for the U.S. Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, a little-known arm of the federal judiciary system that is charged by law with approving or disapproving requests by U.S. intelligence agencies to spy on American citizens in this country.

So tight is the security that only a few officials of the FBI, the department of justice and the national security agency may attend the court's sessions. It is housed on the sixth floor at Justice Department headquarters, but the attorney general himself cannot enter the court unassisted. He does not have the lock combinations.

"We don't even acknowledge that the court is in this building," a Justice Department source said. Now almost two years old, the FISC was created by Congress to impose a strict rule of law on federal law-enforcement agents who operate inside the United States gathering intelligence for national security purposes.

No longer can FBI agents or other intelligence officers do as they did in years past — secretly break into homes in the United States without court approval to tap telephones or plant microphones. Now agents wishing to take such action must first come to the surveillance court for approval.

The requirement of absolute secrecy to the court's operations was made law so that suspected Soviet spies, foreign terrorists or American collaborators would not know that the court was being asked for permission to monitor them. Today, Reagan administration officials are reviewing all the legal restrictions and ground rules that apply to national security investigations. But so far there is no indication that the administration plans to relax the surveillance court's procedures.

Establishment of the court, which is composed of seven federal judges from around the country, was considered a major step forward from the old days when FBI officials, on their own, could decide whose premises could be secretly searched, wiretapped or overheard electronically.

The vagueness of those old standards led to abuses that ultimately resulted in sweeping investigations of the FBI and CIA. As one result, W. Mark Felt and Edward S. Miller were convicted last November on charges that as FBI officers they had ordered illegal break-ins in 1972 and 1973 in searching for fugitive members of the Weather Underground. Although the surveillance court was created to prevent such abuses, certain features of the court have displeased both conservatives and liberals.

The Washington-based Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank that has gained influence in the Reagan administration, is urging that the special court be abolished. The court is "constitutionally repugnant and a judicial aberration," the foundation said in a recent report.

Sam Francis, who edited the Heritage study, said that requiring all electronic surveillance in national security cases to be cleared by the FISC tends to infringe on the constitutional duty of a president to protect the nation's security.

Kenneth C. Bass, who recently resigned as the Justice Department's intelligence counsel, said that service on the FISC constitutes an extra duty by the judges, who are appointed on a rotating basis. The panel's chief judge is George L. Hart Jr. of U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

Aside from the judge, the only persons present for a court session are an official of the FBI or NSA — whichever agency is seeking authority for surveillance — and a member of Bass' office, who acts as the attorney for the agency. A court clerk who has special clearance also is present.

The CIA cannot approach the court because its mandate is now limited to gathering intelligence data overseas. According to him, each hearing looks more like a board meeting than a court proceeding. "The general principle," he said, "is if a court warrant would be required by law enforcement officers in a criminal investigation, the FISC must grant authority if intelligence agencies want to use the same technique in the United States."

Thus, requests to use any electrical or mechanical devices that FBI or NSA officials want to employ in intelligence investigations must be presented to the court on a case-by-case basis. In addition to wiretaps or eavesdropping equipment, such devices may include high-powered telescopes, or "heat-seekers" secretly placed under the hoods of cars to track them.

Germans take to weight shedding

By Larry Gerber

OBERTSTAUFEN, West Germany (AP) — Some go to shed extra weight and may end up wrapped like a mummy in a wet sheet, sweating away the fat. Others may seek a release from tension by stomping around in a pool of Calf-Dry water. Whatever the complaint or the method of treatment, record numbers of West Germans are flocking to health spas. Once exclusive retreats for the rich and noble, health resorts are now within the reach of the masses, thanks to the nation's liberal social security plans.

In this mountain village, "the cure" is the main industry. The Cure Association of the southern town says some 12,000 guests a year come to local hotels and sanatoriums for a regimen known as the "Schrothkur." That is just a fraction of the 380,000 persons — the highest number in postwar history — who applied for federally-sponsored health care benefits in 1980, according to the federal office for employee insurance but about 40,000 of the applications were granted.

Some of the treatments might seem bizarre. Guests here pay $400 to $600 for a three-week treatment which includes a diet of fruit juice, toast and other low-fat essential foods, and a treatment called "packing," or wrapping in wet sheet for about two hours at a time. "In the moist warmth of the packing, the circulation is stimulated, the blood circulation of the organs and skin augmented, the body temperature raised, the metabolism speeded up and the body is made to sweat," explains the rule book for treatment.

The .. packing serves as an essential part of the Schroth cure to remove the poisons and fat." The method is named after Forjmann Schroth, a "natural doctor" who prescribed such methods 160 years ago for stress, overweight, overwork and malaise. "Purity of the field, and you will harvest better fruit," Schroth wrote.

"I lost 15 pounds and feel like a new woman," one patient exulted after her three weeks here. The ancient spas grew up around mineral or hot springs, and variations of the water cure are among the most popular. Dozens of resorts offer the "Kneipp cure," named after another 19th century practitioner, Sebastian Kneipp.

Kneipp, once a tubercular child who said he overcame his illness by hardening himself with daily cold baths in a river, developed a "natural medicine" treatment with plant extracts and balanced diet supplemented by periodic outdoor splashes. Patients practicing the Kneipp cure tramp around in ponds, brooks or the mud flats of the North Sea. The exercise lasts less than a minute, and the foot must be raised completely out of the water with every step, the rules stipulate.

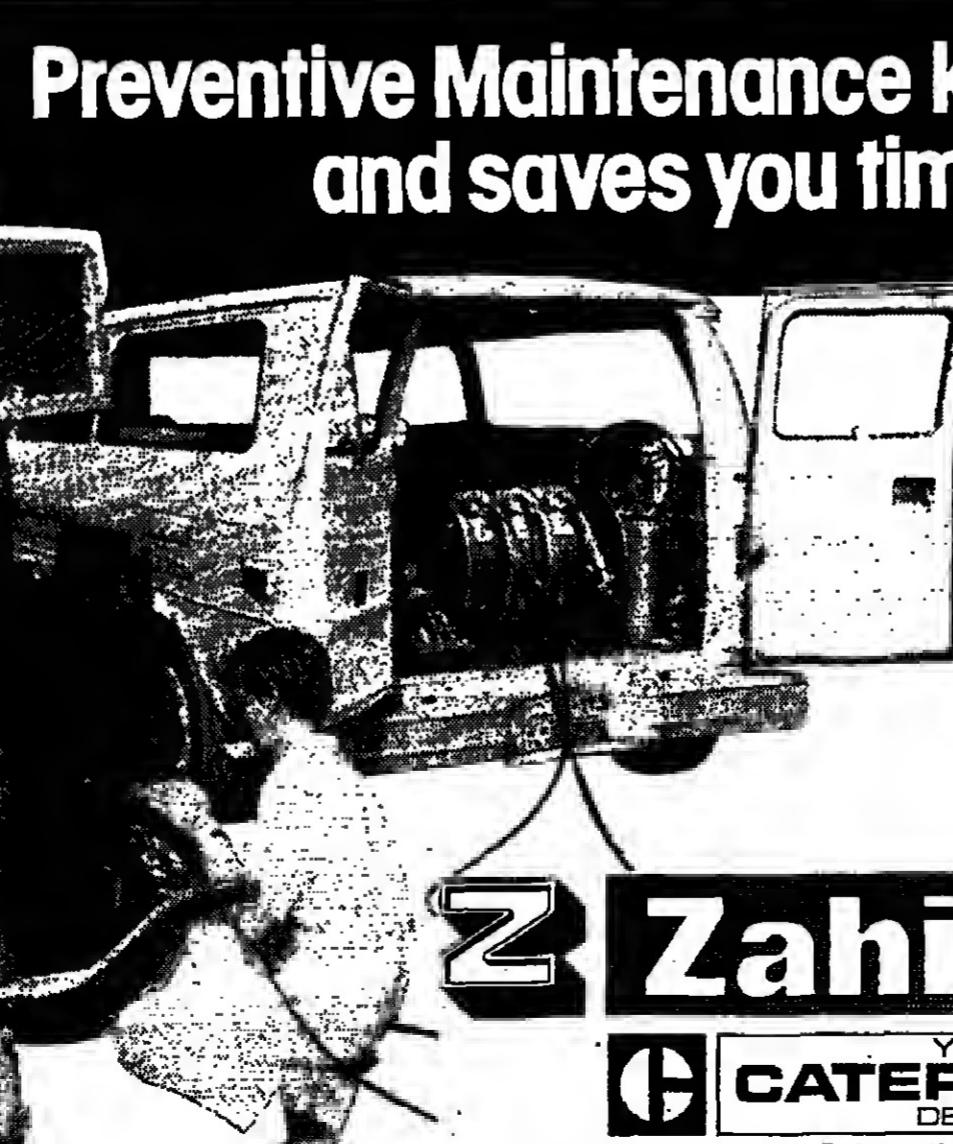

Afterward, the patient dons dry wool socks and goes for a brisk walk or run. In addition to the unusual techniques, practically all the 100 recognized cure resorts in West Germany offer fresh air, exercise, balanced diets, and mineral waters.

Those amenities may account for much of the continued success of the health cures and the widespread faith in their methods, both among the public and the government. The federal government lists a total of 29,000 beds available for insurance-paid cures in some 145 clinics and sanatoriums and 80 other cure homes.

"The idea is to keep people healthy and working, so fewer retire early," explained one health expert. Practically every employed West German contributes to government-supported health and retirement plans, and the number of rehabilitation trips allowed varies greatly from job and according to the need.

Most cures include two to four weeks away from work with most expenses paid, and the resort stay is usually not counted against vacation time, according to federal and state rulers. Permission is rarely granted for more than one cure every two years. In every case, the employee must explain why he needs the cure. "patients generally can't expect a 'cure vacation,' but they have to take part in a real rehabilitation program," the expert said.

Court blocks move by Trudeau

OTTAWA, Canada, April 1 (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's drive to bring the Canadian constitution home from Britain by July 1 has been dealt a setback by a provincial court which ruled he was acting illegally.

The Newfoundland Supreme Court of Appeal said Tuesday that Trudeau must have the consent of Canada's provinces to take any step that would alter the relationship between the provinces and the federal government.

The British House of Commons has held ultimate control of Canada's constitution, the British North America Act, ever since it adopted it in 1867. Trudeau wants the British parliament to surrender the constitution to Canada but first to amend it with two things on which the provincial governments have been unable to agree — a bill of rights and a procedure for amendments.

After unsuccessful negotiations with provincial premiers last year, Trudeau declared an impasse and announced he would petition Britain directly to amend the document and send it to Canada. But he was supported by only two of Canada's 10 provinces, and six have joined lawsuits to try to stop him.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has promised to endorse any proposal for "patribution," as sending the constitution to Canada is called, that clears the Canadian parliament. But British legislators have indicated they would be reluctant to approve a proposal that is not backed by the provinces.

After the adverse court ruling Tuesday, Trudeau offered to have the supreme court of Canada rule on the issue if parliament would first give his constitutional package its approval. Opposition leader Joe Clark, whose progressive Conservatives are blocking parliamentary action with a filibuster, refused. He said the legislators "can't be asked to pass a matter that has been declared illegal by a supreme court of a province."

Hostages return

JAKARTA, April 1 (R) — Thirty-seven exhausted and ecstatic hostages have returned here aboard the aircraft on which five hijackers had imprisoned them since last Saturday. Indonesian commandos stormed the Garuda Airways DC-9 in Bangkok early Tuesday rescuing 44 hostages and killing four or all five of the hijackers.

The pilot of the Indonesian plane, Capt. Hermann Rante, and one commando were seriously wounded in the raid but the rest of the passengers and crew escaped unscathed, according to Indonesian National Security chief Adm. Sudorno. The pilot and six foreign passengers stayed in Bangkok.

Voyager discoveries

Saturn data puzzles experts

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP) — Months after Voyager 1's spectacular visit to Saturn, scientists still are puzzled about the giant ringed planet and what the mountains of data they've got really mean. "We are still encountering things about Saturn that we don't understand," Dr. Bradford Smith told a U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration briefing on scientific results of the mission. "Most of what we don't understand is in the ring system," he said.

Some of Voyager's perplexing discoveries are that the large, solid rings are made up of thousands of thinner so-called ringlets. The prominent B-ring contains moving, spoke-like structures and the newly discovered F-ring consists of ringlets that appear to twist around each other. Smith, head of the team responsible for the 17,500 pictures sent back from Saturn, said "the problem is trying to apply the laws of physics to the conditions that exist near Saturn." Smith and other scientists noted that Saturn is very similar to

BRIEFS

NEW YORK, (R) — DeWitt Wallace, founder of the Reader's Digest, the world's most widely read magazine with a monthly circulation of 30.5 million copies in 163 countries, has died of pneumonia Monday, aged 91.

UNITED NATIONS, (AP) — British delegate Michael Macay, reporting to the U.N. Special Committee on Decolonization Tuesday, said the big news from Pitcairn Island was that in the last year the population had gone up by two — making a total of 61.

The tiny island, now a British colony, was settled in 1790 by mutineers from the British ship Bounty and some Tahitians they brought with them.

LONDON, (AP) — British playwright and Jupiter, the other giant gaseous planet visited by unmanned Voyager spacecraft. Both planets have dark and light zones of moving gases, circulating storm regions and cloud markings.

But the smaller, colder Saturn's markings are muted by a thick haze layer above the cloud tops and wind speeds of up to 1,770 kph are substantially higher than on Jupiter, they said. Voyager 1, which made its closest encounter with Saturn last Nov. 12, discovered that the twisted F-ring is held together between the orbits of two small moons.

Voyager 1, which is on a course that will carry it out of the solar system, discovered or confirmed four new satellites, bringing the number of definite moons to 16. Other satellites still may be discovered or confirmed as scientists sift through other data from the mission. And a companion craft due to go by Saturn in August, Voyager 2, may unveil others, scientists said.

Obote prohibits weekly

KAMPALA, Uganda, April 1. (Agencies) — The Uganda weekly newspaper Topic said in a front-page editorial Tuesday that it is being ordered to stop publication by the government. Topic supports the Uganda Patriotic Movement whose leader, former Defense Minister Yoweri Museveni, is waging a revolt to oust President Milton Obote. It started publication one month after the war that toppled Idi Amin.

The editorial quoted sources as saying that Minister of Internal Affairs Dr. John Luyuliza-Kirunda has already signed an order banning publication of Topic which is due to appear in the official Uganda gazette in a few days.

If banned, Topic would be the fifth weekly newspaper to be closed by the Obote government in the last two weeks. Its disappearance would leave only three weeklies on the market.

After Amin's ouster, Uganda had perhaps the freest press in Africa but the crackdown earlier this month on the English weeklies, The Citizen and The Economy, and the Uganda weeklies Mulungu and Aga-Africa, has cut the heart out of the free press here. The Citizen was the paper of the opposition Democratic Party and The Economy supported Yusufu Lule, the Conservative president who lasted two months after Amin was overthrown and then was forced out by Uganda opponents and Tanzania. Many leaders of the Uganda Patriotic Movement, which Topic supports, have been detained, the latest being the party's publicity secretary Bakulu Mpigi-Wama.

Meanwhile, heavy firing around Kampala barracks Tuesday night sent residents running.

Two ships collide in Gulf of Mexico

NEW ORLEANS, Louisiana, April 1 (AP) — A Japanese tanker loaded with caustic soda collided with a Greek freighter Tuesday in dense fog in the Gulf of Mexico, the U.S. Coast Guard reported. Both vessels were damaged and were taking on water, said Lt. Cmdr. Tom Pearson.

Pearson said an agent for the Japanese vessel contacted the Coast Guard and identified the vessel as the 333-foot Snow Hill, carrying a crew of 21. It was bound from Lake Charles, Louisiana, to Vera Cruz, Mexico, but turned back to Lake Charles after the collision. The Greek vessel was identified as the Eugenio C, an empty bulk carrier on its way to Houston, Texas.

The cause of the collision was not known, but Pearson said visibility was less than one-eighth mile with winds five to 10 mph. The collision happened just minutes before noon about 100 miles south of Cameron, Louisiana. A Coast Guard cutter and aircraft were sent to the scene, and the Exxon Florence, which was in the area, stood by while workers brought the leaks under control.

nine for their homes in fire eyewitness said Wednesday. Automatic rifles, jeep-mounted cannon and grenades were used in fifteen minutes of firing in Mbuye Barracks, two miles from the city.

Residents ran for their homes not knowing if the firing was coming toward them. Reporters who later went to the barracks saw no casualties.

Makerere University officials, meanwhile, denied claims by a Uganda liberation group that 28 bullet-riddled bodies had been found on campus. The recently organized Uganda Freedom Movement (UFM), one of several groups trying to oust Obote, claimed the 28 were among 65 Ugandans massacred by government troops over the weekend.

Atlanta toll mounts to 22

ATLANTA, Georgia, April 1 (AFP) — A boy whose body was found Tuesday in the Chattahoochee River is feared to be the 22nd black child to be murdered here in the past 20 months. The discovery of the body came only 24 hours after the finding of the 21st murder victim, Timothy Hill, 13, in the river three miles away but police said it had been there several days.

The special force of detectives set up to combat the wave of killings which has sowed panic among black parents in Atlanta was investigating the latest death Wednesday. The body, the fourth to be found in a local river, was spotted caught up in the roots of a tree, police said.

In NBA playoffs

Bulls, 76ers streak ahead

NEW YORK, April 1 (AP) — The streaking Chicago Bulls and the rebounding Philadelphia 76ers have drawn first blood in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The Bulls, who won their final eight games of the regular season, racked up victory no. 9 Tuesday night by beating the New York Knicks 90-80 as Ricky Sobers scored 18 points and Artis Gilmore grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked seven shots.

The 76ers, shaking off the disappointment of their season-ending loss at Boston which cost them the Division title, overpowered the Indiana Pacers 124-108 behind 32 points by Julius Erving and 10 points apiece by Darryl Dawkins and Robby Jones.

On Wednesday the playoff focus shifts West as the other two best-of-three mini-series get under way with Houston at Los Angeles and Kansas City at Portland.

The Bulls fell behind 24-12 after a dreadful first quarter but recovered and shut down the Knicks' running game as Gilmore anchored a staunch defensive effort. The 12 points were the fewest scored by the Knicks all season.

"We made an extra-special effort to stop them on defense," said Bobby Jones. "We played smart basketball, helping each other out and double-teaming. Indiana has a lot of shooters and can get hot quickly."

Leeds gives Ipswich a thrashing

LONDON, April 1 (AP) — Leeds United upset Ipswich 3-0 Tuesday night and threw the race for the English Soccer Championship wide open again.

Ipswich retained a slender one-point lead over Aston Villa, its only serious contender for the title. Ipswich has 52 points and Villa 51, and both have seven more games to play.

The kick-off at Leeds was delayed 15 minutes while officials tried to get swarming crowds into the Elland Road Stadium. Then

Kevin Hird and Carl Harrie stunned Ipswich by giving the home team a 2-0 lead at half-time.

Paul Hart made it 3-0 for Leeds in the second half. It was Ipswich's fourth league defeat of the season, and its heaviest. A crowd of 26,462 watched the upset.

West Bromwich downed Everton 2-0 and climbed to third place in the standings. Bryan Robson and Ally Brown scored the goals — one in each half and a meager crowd of

Australia in tough group

CANBERRA, Australia April 1 (AP) — The host country, Australia, ended up with the worst possible draw when the groups for the 1981 World Youth Soccer Championship were selected on Tuesday.

Australia faces the near impossible task of finishing as winners or runners-up in Group D, a four-team Group containing Cup holders Argentina, now minus the mercurial Diego Maradona, and a strong England side crammed with young First Division talent.

Also in Group 'D' is a team from the United Republic of Cameroun in central west Africa, of which little is known.

Group 'A' in the 16-nation competition is made up of the United States, Uruguay, Poland and Qatar. Group 'B' includes Romania, Brazil, Italy and South Korea, and Group 'C' has West Germany, Mexico, Spain and Egypt.

The tournament will be played at six stadiums around Australia. It will be seen by an estimated television audience around the world of over one billion and is being billed in Australia as the greatest sporting event here since the 1956 Melbourne Olympics.

The Sydney Cricket ground, not regarded by soccer officials here as the ideal venue but selected because of its site, Sydney's climate and spectator facilities, will stage the final on Sunday, October 18.

Before that each group plays a round-robin with the winners and runners-up moving forward to the quarterfinals, then by elimination to the semis.

Philadelphia outscored Indiana 16-6 in the final 3:13 of the first quarter to lead 38-33, then broke the game wide open with a 16-4 spurt to start the second period for a 54-37 advantage.

Indiana, making its first playoff appearance in five NBA seasons, pulled within 10 points three times in the second half but could come no closer.

"The defense was the big difference tonight," said Bobby Jones. "We played smart basketball, helping each other out and double-teaming. Indiana has a lot of shooters and can get hot quickly."

Injuries threaten Liverpool's chances

Kevin Hird and Carl Harrie stunned Ipswich by giving the home team a 2-0 lead at half-time.

David O'Leary scored his first goal of the season nine minutes from time to give Arsenal an unimpressive 2-1 win over Birmingham before 17,431 fans at Highbury. Steve Stapleton gave Arsenal an early lead but Frank Worthington equalized in the second half — on the eve of his departure for the United States to play for Tampa Bay Gowdies.

Leicester City came back from two goals down to hold Manchester City to a 3-3 draw at Manchester — a brave stroke for Leicester's bid for First Division survival.

Meanwhile, injuries threaten to undermine Liverpool's chances of winning the English Soccer League Cup in Wednesday night's replay of the final against West Ham.

The reigning English champions are certain to be without midfielder Graeme Souness and strikers David Johnson and David Fairclough. Steve Heighway, who was recently brought back into the team at age 33, could also miss the game because of a groin strain.

West Ham, Second Division leaders, held Liverpool to a 1-1 draw after 30 minutes of extra time at Wembley Stadium two weeks ago. The replay is set for Villa Park, Birmingham.

Bob Paisley has had so many casualties among his players that he made no attempt to name a lineup for the game. "We will just have to wait and see who we can get on to the field," he said.

Some of his news was good, however. Liverpool captain Phil Thompson, who has missed four matches because of a thigh injury, was passed fit and is expected to resume his place in the center of the defense.

Jahangir begins well

LONDON, April 1 (R) — Pakistan squash prodigy Jahangir Khan raced through his opening match in the British Open Squash Championship Tuesday. The 17-year-old fourth seed beat Mike Sherren of Zimbabwe 9-7, 9-0, 9-1.

Jahangir, winner of the World Amateur title two years ago, is tipped to reach the final where he could threaten the supremacy of seven-time winner Geoff Hunt of Australia.

World champion Hunt was not in action Tuesday but his burly compatriot Kevin Shawcross surprisingly crashed out to Jamshed Gul of Pakistan. The former British Amateur champion looked out of touch during the first two games but recovered to force a decider before losing 10-8, 9-6, 3-9, 4-9.

Hockey matches abandoned

KUALA LUMPUR, April 1 (AFP) — The two fixtures scheduled to be played here Wednesday afternoon in the Intercontinental Field Hockey Cup match were abandoned due to heavy rains.

The New Zealand-Singapore tie in Group 'B' and the Malaysia-Wales tie in Group 'A' will now be played on Monday.

The New Zealand-Singapore tie was abandoned after 58 minutes of play due to the unplayable condition of the ground. There was no score till then, though the Kiwis had dominated the game.

It was drizzling before the bully-off which finally turned into a heavy downpour a few minutes after resumption. Umpires Sancini of Italy and Rouse of Zimbabwe consulted earlier, but decided to carry on before calling it a few minutes later.

Earlier in the day, the Group 'A' matches saw Zimbabwe defeat Italy 4-1 and Belgium beat France 2-1.

EMCA meetto see top stars in action

By a Staff Writer

JEDDAH, April 1 — Friday (April 3) sees this season's final meeting in the motor-cross calendar when EMCA stage a meet at their Medina Road track near the Petromin Tank Farm, scheduled for a 1.00 p.m. start.

EMCA have planned a few surprises to end the season on a really high note, including the presentation of the trophies for this year's overall winners in each class of bike. Also planned is a special end-of-season raffle and all spectators will automatically enter the raffle when they buy their entry ticket to the meet. There are some spectacular prizes for the raffle, headed by a return ticket to Madrid donated by Iberia Airlines. Next comes a Certina watch from Titahi Jewellers, a portable generator from Honda, followed by several other prizes which should see ten people taking home a little extra something.

Let's not forget the people who make all this possible. EMCA are expecting the usual high turnout of riders and all the top pros are scheduled to be there. Riders are also due in from Tabuk and Abha, and several new local riders have been seen out in practice.

The most interesting event could be the 125cc series, where Josse Binst will be out to avenge his defeat by young Marc Maquinay in the last meet. Brian Wy n has recently returned to Jeddah, and he will make life in the small bike event even more interesting.

Play washed out

ST. JOHN'S, Antigua, April 1 (R) — Rain denied the West Indies cricketers a whole day in which to press home their fourth Test advantage over England. Bad weather followed by more downpours left the West Indies one day in which to move 3-0 ahead in the five match series.

The main interest remains in the men's events, and 7 p.m. will see No. 1 seed and hot favorite Renne Abastillas taking on Bertil Ohlesson (No. 4) while Mike Relieve (No. 6) plays Jerry Hurst (No. 2). The only upset in the seeding was Joe Reilly's downfall at the hands of Relieve, but this was always a possibility. Relieve's real ability was unknown before the tournament but he has quickly put himself into the No. 1 challengers position.

The 6-4, 6-3 score was a fair indication of his match with Reilly, but he always appeared to have plenty in hand. On form he and Abastillas should meet in Friday's final (at 3.30) and the eager crowd could well see Abastillas make his best tennis to date.

These two join forces Thursday (9.00) and take on Reilly (another sucker of the Phillipino treatment!) and Khashif, who survived losing the first set against Rogan and Cunningham to pull through 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. In the other half, No. 2 seeds Hurst and Poppe meet Sterrey and Biers.

AI France have included prizes of return tickets to Paris for the winning doubles pairs as well as the singles winners, and it is more than likely that either Abastillas or Relieve will be enjoying two trips to that fair European capital this coming year.

IDA coffers run dry as states delay funds

PARIS, April 1 (R) — The world body which gives easy loans to the poorest developing countries has said it will have to hold up the signing of new ones because governments have not come forward quickly enough with funds.

The International Development Association (IDA), the soft loan agency of the World Bank, said it would be unable to sign new agreements from Wednesday until it gets more funds from its members.

After two days of talks here, officials of 27 of the 33 IDA countries issued a statement expressing deep concern at the delay in raising new funds and at the fact that U.S. plans for aid are still pending in Congress which has not yet approved increased contributions.

The statement said that "in the absence of United States authorization and appropriation, or of further voluntary contributions, IDA would have no further commitment authority commencing in April 1980." However, World Bank officials said credit agreements already signed will be honored in full. The IDA lends money to the poorest developing countries without charging interest or only at minimal rates.

Last year IDA countries agreed in principle to provide $1.2 billion for IDA lending during the three years up to mid-1983. But only 18 countries, accounting for $598 billion, have so far authorized the new lending.

Expect states to decideBankers fail to strike deal on Polish debt

LONDON, April 1 (AP) — U.S. and other Western bankers have failed to hammer out an agreement on restructuring $3.1 billion in Polish debts due this year.

A communiqué said the bankers will continue negotiations with Poland, but are looking to Western creditor governments to find a solution. "Although the situation is difficult, the possibility of a satisfactory solution can only be achieved through calm and restrained discussions taking place on a continuing basis," the communiqué said.

The bankers, representing 40 of the 200 Western banks owned money by Poland, met Tuesday with Jan Woloszyn, deputy chairman of Bank Handlowy, Poland's foreign trade bank. Another meeting was scheduled Wednesday, with more talks set for April 8.

There was no mention of Poland's request for a $1 billion "bridging loan" to help it out of its economic crisis. The Poles also are seeking another $8 billion from the banks to help them repay the existing debt and obtain new credits.

The Times of London noted Tuesday: "There seems little doubt that the bank will have to reschedule existing debts, but there are sharp divisions of opinion about the advisability of making fresh loans."

Poland, which borrowed heavily from the West over the last decade to build up its economy, has a foreign debt of at least $23.1 billion.

Out of this, $12.7 billion is owed to Western commercial banks about 10 per cent of it to U.S. banks.

Earlier, Poland reiterated its request for a $1 billion bridging loan from Western banks as a matter of urgency.

Although Monday's compromise in Poland between the government and the Solidarity union encouraged Western financiers, banking officials said they were reluctant to grant new credit without guarantees from their government.

Apart from bridging loan, Poland seeks rescheduling of its $7.5 billion debt due for reimbursement this year, over an eight-to-10-year period with five years' grace. This sum comprises $3.1 billion of private credit and $4.4 billion from Western governments or guaranteed by them.

Poland also seeks $1.3 billion new private or public credit to help plug its trade gap estimated at $800 million this year and for paying $2.6 billion worth of interest this year. The mooted $1 billion line of credit was seen here as a stopgap pending decisions on these substantive requests. These decisions may not be forthcoming for months.

British bank foresees fall in economy

LONDON, April 1 (R) — The Bank of England has said that the British economy was likely to decline further during 1981.

In its quarterly bulletin, the bank predicted that investment would continue to drop sharply, unemployment would rise and a combination of higher taxes, lost jobs and lower pay rates would hit consumer spending.

"Taken together, these various influences may tend to reduce gross domestic output again this year," the bank said. Britain has been suffering its worst recession since the 1930s, with manufacturing output down by 15 per cent in 1980 and unemployment now up to 9.5 per cent of the work force.

The bank said, however, that the economy had made some progress, citing lower levels of wage increases and manning in industry and improved efficiency. The bank took a more pessimistic view of the economy than Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Geoffrey Howe, who said last week there was "quite an impressive case for optimism."

Bonn ups petrol price

BONN, April 1 (R) — West Germany raised the price of petrol by eight pfennings per liter (117 cents per gallon) Wednesday in what Finance Minister Hans Matthaeus called an attempt to promote energy saving.

Matthaeus told the magazine Quick the rise was to reduce oil imports and enable us to return to interest rates which encourage employment. Opposition Christian Democrats called the rise a scandal and handed out leaflets at petrol stations calling for protest at the increase.

The increased petrol tax is expected to produce an extra 1.7 billion marks ($10 million) in government revenue.

U.K. blocks accord on EEC farm prices

BRUSSELS, April 1 (AFP) — British objections Wednesday foiled a farm price agreement by the European Economic Community (EEC) covering the next agricultural year.

French Agriculture Minister Pierre Maheugne said after an all-night session:

"All the components of an agreement were in place early today, but Britain was against it." Talks will resume later Wednesday. Britain has asked for the detailed figures implied in a compromise solution discussed during the night. Under this arrangement the average price rise would be nine per cent (milk nine per cent, beef 10 per cent, pork 11 per cent and grains 6.5 per cent). At the same time, West German monetary compensatory amounts (MCA's) would drop 3.3 per cent.

During negotiations, Britain opposed a cut in its MCA's and reductions in some production and consumption aid. Owing to

Brake said,

Belgian gendarmes threw teargas canisters into a crowd of about 500 tomatoe, egg and rock-throwing protesters. In a replay of Tuesday's confrontation, the crowd dispersed temporarily, but filtered back to take up positions outside the Charlemagne building at EEC headquarters.

Dutch Farm Minister Gerrit Braks, chairman of the meeting, said ministers were trying to do the best they could for their individual countries and would not be swayed by the noisy demonstrations. "We don't take decisions under pressure from the streets,"

The union spokesman said the vote had been most favorable in the midwest and added: "We did the worst in Pennsylvania and West Virginia."

U.S. coal strike likely to drag on WASHINGTON, April 1 (R) — A five-day-old strike by U.S. coal miners appeared certain to be prolonged as votes counted Tuesday night showed more than two to one against accepting a newly-negotiated three-year contract.

The 16,000-strong United Mine Workers of America (UMWA) called the strike last Friday when their previous contract expired before a new settlement had been ratified by the rank-and-file. Members voted Tuesday on a proposed new contract hammered out in protracted negotiations with the mine owners represented by the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association (BCOA).

A UMWA spokesman said 656 local unions out of 757 had reported and been counted. There were 30,838 votes in favor of the contract and 67,750 against, he said.

The union spokesman said the vote had been most favorable in the midwest and added: "We did the worst in Pennsylvania and West Virginia."

Financial Roundup

Riyal recovers ground

By J.H. Hammond

JEDDAH, April 1 (R) — The dollar recovered somewhat on the European markets Wednesday after the confusion following the attempt on Reagan's life. The biggest gains were against the sterling and the French franc, but moderate gains were also registered against other European currencies. The slight strengthening was surprising to some financial observers as Eurodollar interest rates had eased slightly over Tuesday. One month Eurodollar deposit rates now stand at 13 1/2 — 13 1/4 percent, but this seemingly low rate was also due to technical trading factors of having to deal for maturities falling over in New York.

Locally, the riyal market continued to recover, fairly quiet with liquidity still available. Dealers said riyal interest rates continued to remain unaffected by outside swings and they eased further to 10 1/2 to 10 1/4 per cent in the six month period and 13 1/2 per cent in the one year period.

The underlying yield cover for the riyal would suggest that lenders are preferring to lend — no longer fearing that interest rates will continue to fall. This is a reversal of the "unusual" yield cover for the riyal market

Taipei plans to install solar house this year

TAIPEI, April 1 (CNA) — The Energy Research Laboratories of the Industrial Technology Research Institute is planning to set up a demonstration solar house in nationalist China within the year.

In a package of projects submitted to the Ministry of Economic Affairs for approval, the research laboratories proposed to install a solar water heater, solar air-conditioning unit, solar refrigerator, and a solar lamp, all to be powered by photovoltaic cells.

Dr. Yeh Hsuan, head of the laboratories, indicated that the primary purpose behind the solar house is to develop a new technique for thermal insulation by which the energy needed for cooling conventional houses is reduced.

He also said that the location of the house is still undecided, but plenty of sunshine will be necessary, as will a low air pollution rate. The solar house is estimated to cost $100,000.

Quit EEC, Chirac tells Britain

PARIS April 1 (AFP) — Gaullist leader Jacques Chirac, a candidate in the French presidential election, has called on Britain to leave the European Economic Community (EEC).

Chirac, who is also mayor of Paris, attacked Britain's "tenacity and hypocrisy" over the Common Market, saying that in signing the treaty Britain had not respected its commitment to create a united Western Europe.

where bankers often witnessed short-term interest rates to be higher than long-term deposit rates.

However, it is reported that excess liquidity is now available, this being a continuation of the bankers cutting down on previously held "long" dollar positions with the dealers in the value of that currency, and secondly, and of more importance, is ministry payments before the end of the local fiscal year in May.

Against the dollar, the exchange rate for the riyal fluctuated at levels of 3.3495.00, or less, but again it was due to technical factor of borrowing a maturity.

With the easing of the Polish situation and with markets recovering from the after shock of the assassination bid, gold and silver fell sharply in New York from levels of $514 per ounce to $507 per ounce for gold. The European bullion markets at one stage took the price levels to $505 before rallying to $515 per ounce levels. Silver was quoted a $12.15 per ounce in later afternoon trading.

The late afternoon trading rates for the dollar were as follows — sterling 2.2460, Swiss franc 1.9160, French franc 4.9810, Mark: 2.0965, yen: 211.60. Dealers attribute the relative stability of the dollar to the sentiment that President Reagan will now have a wider popular mandate to put through tough economic policies at home.

Oil market balanced, says IEA

PARIS, April 1 (AP) — The International Energy Agency, which represents all Western oil consuming countries except France, said Tuesday the world oil market now is generally balanced between supply and demand, but "remains highly fragile."

The IEA also said Western countries should begin building up their oil stocks during the second and third quarters of 1981 in anticipation of winter consumption.

The oil market is now in much better balance than in December of 1980, and there are not at present any serious country or company imbalances," the IEA governing board said in a report issued from its Paris headquarters. "The overall situation nevertheless remains highly fragile due to uncertainties about oil availabilities and oil demand," the IEA added.

The agency said it would continue to monitor the market for changes in supply and demand and called on member countries to continue to supply information on oil stocks, consumption and oil purchases.

Some members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cut production last year because of what they saw as a world "oil glut."

Leader's ouster likely

Polish union facing conflicts

GDANSK, Poland, April 1 (AP) — Solidarity leaders said Wednesday that Anna Walentynowicz, the crane operator at the Gdansk shipyards whose dismissal for union activities last year sparked strikes here, is facing possible ouster because of differences with some leaders.

Andrzej Gwiazda, no. 2 man in the leadership of the 10-million-member independent union said "Anna Walentynowicz could be ousted from the presidium because she is too popular for some leaders' liking and you quote me on that."

Solidarity's national coordinating commission held a second round session here Wednesday after canceling a national general strike Tuesday. The strike call was suspended after union leader Lech Walesa reached a last-minute agreement Monday with the government over union security and won promises that officials behind the beating of three unionists in Bydgoszcz March 19 would be found and punished.

But as the union voted to cancel a nationwide strike alert — with the exception of Bydgoszcz — declared the day after the beat-

U.S. willing to resume arms talks

BRUSSELS, April 1 (R) — The United States has assured its European allies that it is willing to resume talks with Moscow on limiting European nuclear weapons but has not specified the time. A date to restart the negotiations on medium-range theater nuclear forces (TNF) is likely to be announced at the next NATO ministerial council in Rome in May, alliance sources said.

Several European countries, under strong pressure from left-wing, anti-nuclear opinion at home, urged the U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs, Lawrence Eagleburger, Tuesday to relaunch the talks as soon as possible. But participants at the one-day meeting of NATO's special consultative group recognized that the Reagan administration needed time to clarify its arms control policy, the sources said, and did not push for a date.

One of the most awkward problems is how to start TNF talks — supposing that Moscow is still ready to join — without waiting for the expected reopening of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT), they said. The SALT II treaty, dealing with intercontinental weapons, has not been ratified by the U.S. Congress.

The TNF talks, about which preliminary U.S.-Soviet exchanges took place in Geneva last October, are envisaged as the third round of the SALT negotiations. "The nature of the TNF-SALT relationship will have to await the outcome of the U.S. review of arms control. However, this is not a question that need delay implementation of our TNF arms control approach," a NATO source said after the meeting.

The special consultative group, made up of high officials and chaired by Eagleburger, agreed that the alliance remained firmly committed to its double-barreled decision of December 1979 to modernize its nuclear arsenal in Europe while starting East-West talks to limit medium-range nuclear weapons, the sources said.

Meanwhile, neutral and nonaligned states Tuesday presented a compromise proposal designed to clear the way for final agreement at the long-stalled European security review conference in Madrid, official sources said. Western delegation sources said the 30-page document, submitted at a plenary session of the 35-state meeting, represented the basis for discussion on a final conference document. The Madrid meeting started in November and was originally due to end March 5.

The western sources said they were unsatisfied with some of the neutral and nonaligned proposals, notably on human rights and information. The Soviet Union had no immediate reaction to the compromise plan when it was tabled Tuesday by Yugoslavia.

First in 50 years Time change amuses Soviets

MOSCOW, April 1 (AP) — Hundreds of cheering Russians, clutching cameras and telescopes, crowded around the Kremlin clocktower early Wednesday to make a celebration of the Soviet Union's first move to daylight savings time in 50 years. The time change, designed to save energy by using daylight hours more efficiently, was meticulously planned and publicized by Soviet authorities, but public confusion about the change persisted even after the midnight switch.

The clockwatchers outside the Kremlin on Red Square discussed with relish the workings of daylight savings time, but citizens at a nearby railroad station were less sure. Some passengers hadn't heard about the change and missed their trains — "I don't have time to read the papers," one complained — and railway employees argued among themselves about how schedules would be affected.

Outside the station, about half the passers-by seemed to know about the time change. A street-sweeper told inquirers that it was 12:30 a.m., ignoring a newly adjusted clock above his head that gave the new time of 1:30. On Red Square, high-spirited youths and adults virtually ignored the midnight changing of the guard at Lenin's tomb — a spit-and-polish ceremony that usually draws attention — and stared instead at the Kremlin's 67-meter-tall Spassky Clock Tower.

As soon as the clock struck midnight local time (at 2100 GMT) Tuesday, the hands began moving forward rapidly toward 1:00 to the cheers of the crowd. The cheers turned to guffaws when the bands overshot the new time and came to rest at 1:11, but authorities then stopped the clock and restarted it when 1:11 arrived.

Soviet radio, television and newspapers labored for weeks before the time change to explain it to citizens and convince them that the extra sunlight will be good for their health. One newspaper, Socialist Industry, promised Tuesday that with extra sunlight, "the heart, intestines and all the muscles of the body would begin to work more energetically."

Soviet television dispensed advice to farmers on when to milk cows under the new time system — it's the farmer's job to adapt to the new schedule, it said, not the cows — and a radio program assured some worried citizens that "the length of the morning will be the same." The Soviet Health Ministry's magazine noted that some parents were worried how their children would take time change. "We want to reassure you," the magazine said, quoting scientific assurances that children adapt quickly to such changes.

The Soviet Union switched regularly between winter and summer time until 1930, when the changes were stopped. Several generations of Soviet citizens have never before experienced daylight savings time, which is routine in many Western countries and also used by some of the Soviet Union's east European allies. The summer time introduced at midnight Tuesday puts Moscow four hours ahead of Greenwich Mean Time. It will last until Oct. 1, when clocks will be put back again until next spring.

Sicily prisoners take 18 hostage

MESSINA, Sicily, April 1 (AP) — Three inmates demanding a transfer to another prison took 18 persons hostage at the Gazzetta prison here Tuesday and locked themselves in a medical office, police reported. The rebels, armed with sharpened spoon and hole-punching tools, broke into the infirmary where 11 unarmed guards and five bandymen were waiting to be interviewed by two male nurses, police said.

They later released two guards and one worker before starting negotiations with police and prison officials, they said. Police sources reported earlier that more than 30 prisoners took part in the revolt, but they said later only three prisoners — including a murderer serving a life term and a suspected terrorist — were involved.

Police sources said the revolt was led by Santo Tucci, 26, who is serving a life term for killing an inmate, and awaiting another trial for staging a revolt at another Sicilian prison in 1979. Police identified the others as Antonio Faro, described as a common criminal serving a term for attempted jail breaks, and Aldo Mauro, 28, a suspected terrorist convicted on robbery charges. Prison officials said the trio, without giving any reason, asked to be transferred to a prison in Ascoli Piceno in southeastern Italy.

Two lawyers were brought in at the request of the convicts to act as intermediaries in their negotiations with the prison authorities. The prison also houses 23 convicted Red Brigades terrorists in a separate maximum security wing. The rebels, however, made no "political demands," the sources said.

Oslo expels Russian

OSLO, April 1 (AFP) — A member of the Soviet trade mission here was declared persona non grata by Norwegian authorities Wednesday, reportedly for involvement in industrial espionage.

The Foreign Ministry informed Soviet Ambassador to Oslo Yuri Kirishenko that Timor Besedin, described as a member of the mission's "technical staff" should leave Norway as soon as possible for "activities that conflicted with his position." The ministry also told Kirishenko that two former members of the trade mission, named as Giorgi Petrov and Evgeni Mironenko, were to be considered banned from Norway for the same reason.

Good Morning

By Jihad Al Khazem

My old grandmother had a favorite expression: "God save us from what's worse!" She used it whenever she saw something untoward — a young man in bippy gear, a kid who talked out of line anything. With it, she used a certain gesture, designed to give emphasis to her exasperation; hands raised before the eye as if to block out the ugly sight.

And that's exactly what I felt like doing as I read that news item the other day: child of nine years, all thirty-five kilos of him, and all of his one meter forty in height, holding up a New York Bank wit a toy gun, and running away with about $100. "God save us from what's worse!" Indeed, I bet the old lady would have used a much stronger expression to express her dismay. A certain kind of adventurousness is nice in a kid. But that's surely taking it too far.

In any case, the kid later surrendered himself to the police, accompanied by his father and a lawyer. He was held for a few hours and then let go. The court said there is no law to try kids under ten for the crime of armed robbery. (Although I noted that kids could be tried for murder from the age of thirteen, and for armed robbery from fifteen. The kid, the court said, will have to be placed under supervision — society cannot take chances or what he might get up to after such a promising start.)

How in a case like this the question is ask is not whether the kid is a criminal. This is surely without meaning at such a early age. Responsibility cannot but be placed on society at large, in its violence which children see in the street as well as in the home on television. Some say that this is a price to be paid for progress, that there's no way round it. But if that's the case then surely we can pray this kind of progress passes us by —

Soviets protect Kabul as army sent to fight liberators in provinces

NEW DELHI, April 1 (Agencies) —

Afghan forces have been moving out of Kabul to put down a flare-up of rebellion in the provinces, leaving the capital's security with Soviet troops, Western diplomatic sources said in New Delhi Wednesday. The sources had no estimate of the number of Afghan troops involved. But they quoted reliable Afghan sources in Kabul as saying all four central corps divisions stationed there were being sent out.

Fighting had broke out in at least 20 of Afghanistan's 29 provinces, many of them bordering the Soviet frontier, the diplomatic sources said. They added that hundreds of wounded civilians and Afghan troops had been brought to hospitals in Kabul over the two weeks. They said three of the four major highways leading out of the capital were closed for most of last week.

The situation in Afghanistan unsettled, particularly in Herat and Kandahar where there had been an "upsurge in freedom fighters" activity. The sources said government troops apparently attacked a hill east of Kabul airport last week. Three large explosions were heard interspersed with small arms fire. The sources also said liberators kidnapped the governor of Logar province, neighboring Kabul, last week, along with 11 of his bodyguards.

Heavy Soviet transport activity had been noticed at Kabul airport during the past week, the sources said. More Soviet troops were flown in during the last seven days to Kabul and to Bagram Air Base, about 56 kms north of the Afghan capital. On Monday a soldier shot dead several Afghans in front of a cinema. But the sources could not say if the soldier was Afghan or Soviet.

Bomb hits Salvador bank

SAN SALVADOR, April 1 (Agencies) — A bomb destroyed Citibank's offices in an 18-story office building Tuesday evening and knocked out windows across the street in the Camino Real Hotel. No injuries were reported in the 7:30 p.m. (0030 GMT) blast, but flying glass in the hotel narrowly missed several people, most of them reporters covering the civil unrest here.

The windows in the hotel's press center, where the offices of the Associated Press and United Press International are located, were blown inward. Although no group claimed responsibility for the bombing, banks and businesses have been recent targets for liberation groups fighting to topple the civilian-military junta.

The liberation forces are trying to topple the junta, which has recently received major increase in American aid, including the help of U.S. military advisers. Rightists also seek to oust the junta and install a conservative military government.

The liberation forces are trying to topple the junta, which has recently received major increase in American aid, including the help of U.S. military advisers. Rightists also seek to oust the junta and install a conservative military government.

Wednesday is the 11th anniversary of the founding of Popular Liberation Forces, and there was immediate speculation from police sources that the bombing was an FFL operation.

The attack on the Citibank office, located in the 18-story Roble Towers, was the third in two years on the ground floor office, but the most serious of the three.

A businessman on the eight floor of the building said: "when the blast came I thought the entire building was falling." He identified himself as Marco Antonio Robles, director of the Central American Bank of Economic Integration.

Powerful bombs have been blowing up buildings here with increasing regularity in recent weeks and it appears the liberators are renewing their activity in the capital after a relatively quiet month.

Elsewhere, authorities reported finding the bodies of 30 more gunshot victims in various parts of the country, but did not say whether they were battle casualties or targets of right-wing terrorism.

Skirmishes with liberation forces are taking place every day, authorities said. A liberation source told the Associated Press that day night. The dinner was canceled following John Hinckley's arrest, said Bush spokesman Shirley Green.

In Denver, Hinckley's distraught parents said they had hired a Washington attorney to represent their son. His father John temporarily stepped down Tuesday as chairman of the Vanderbilt Energy Company "because of a tragedy involving a member of his family," a company statement said.

Reagan learned for the first time Tuesday that his Press Secretary James S. Brady, had been shot in the head, and that two law officers also had been injured. "Oh damn, Oh damn," the president exclaimed when he was told a bullet had entered Brady's brain. His eyes brimmed with tears.

White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III told reporters it was "incredible" that Brady had survived. Doctors said Tuesday that Brady's chance of recovery was good, possibly without severe mental or physical impairment, although he remained in critical condition.

Brady can speak and see and may be able to sit up in bed within a few days, doctors said Wednesday. A morning report on his condition said the 40-year-old Brady can now move all four limbs and "continues to improve" but "remains in critical condition."

Physicians say Brady may recover without severe permanent mental or physical impairment.

And during a visit with his wife, Tuesday night, Brady played a game of catch "demonstrating his ability to move in spite of his weakened condition," Wednesday's medical bulletin said. The report also said Brady was breathing well without the assistance of a respirator.

Earlier, Reagan won an important victory for his economic program Tuesday when the Senate upheld nearly $1 billion of his budget cuts. It was the first major vote on a Reagan proposal in Congress since the attempt on his life. Later, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan told reporters the shooting of Reagan could help spur passage of his program.

Undecided Congressmen might take the view that "he's put his life on the line for his country. At least we should give his program a fair chance," Regan said.

"... It will mean the debate will be less strident. There won't be as many people picking personally on the president."
